

From Eric

Week Two was for the younger kids and Allen Nye the Magic Guy was here. We really appreciate Allan and the kids love him.

This camp was the hardest as it was right behind the first one. We only had Saturday and Sunday to recuperate, clean up and get ready for the next one.

The week between camps 2 and 3 I got kicked by my neighbors horse and broke my leg just below the knee. This happened on Monday and on Wednesday I went to the VA emergency room. I had to go back the following Tuesday (during camp) and then on Friday (the last day of camp). I had pins put in. Doc said I couldn't put any weight on the leg for 6-8 weeks and possibly 3 months depending on how the leg heals. This has really put me down. Sure can't do much on crutches except fall.

Although we've had great kids and great camps, it has been a battle. We have been battling satan since spring. Cars breaking down, our gator breaking down, being short-handed, Shea getting sick, my broken leg, flat tires, dead batteries, horses getting out and disappearing, etc., etc., and the list goes on. God has given victory and gotten the glory, but we are mentally, physically, and spiritually weak and tired. How desperately we need these upcoming 3 weeks before our last camp to recover. We will persevere and overcome. Glory to God!!! Three Salvations

Wonderful Weeks of Camp

God has truly blessed us this year with the kids he's sent to be part of our lives.

Week One

Teen-agers 13-18

The first week of camp we had a small group of teens. We had separated the boys and girls for Bible times so they would open up. We did this to train them a little deeper and pick a few that could help us with kids week.

So we thought.....

Sitting around the camp fire on Thur night the kids were throwing their sins that had hold of them in the fire. They had been sharing what God has done in their lives. The Spirit of God was with us as we held hands in a circle and prayed for each other.

The kids were enjoying getting to know each other better and having a good time.

Then what I dread to happen, happened. We had just finished with the campfire and one of the girls was coughing and having a hard time breathing, (but she was ok) so I ran to the house to get something to help.

Eric had sent the kids to the cabin. When I got back, they were rushing me to get her in the car as her breathing was really bad!

We put her in the car, I called her mom and she said she would come get her, and for her sis to pack their things up, I went to get her sis then called the mom back and told her I would meet her as she was truly not breathing good.

Again this was a time when the kids rallied together in prayer.

Coming back from the hospital. I found that the girls had been praying and were gathered together.

In the boys cabin, most were still huddled crying out to God for Courtney. They were also asking for forgiveness for other things so their heart would be pure from sin. Let me tell you, they continued to pray until 1:30am when I finally had word that she was doing ok (It was a combination of dehydrated and smoke inhalation).

Of course then we had to have our praise time!! What a group!

They were drawn even closer to our heavenly Father in our time of need. From past years experiences they knew right what to do. Go to prayer!

Last year by the end of the summer I was about ready to give up on teens here, but my faith in teens was renewed by this group.

I need to remember why I love teens so much, they are stepping into adulthood and this is their time to learn to be who God wants them to be. This might be the last chance to show them there is a different way of life, and to show them the love of God.
